

ABSTRACT

A system and method for creating a presentation that is published on the Internet. Image files stored on a user's computer are selected for uploading to a server computer by a user. The server computer generates and stores the presentation. Furthermore, the server computer assigns a uniform resource locator for the presentation in order to access the presentation.